

Sarah Kirk earned her graduate certificate in TESOL (focus on teaching adults) from The Pennsylvania State University's World Campus program in 2017. She has taught Academic English primarily for pre-college adult students at the University of Alaska Anchorage since 1994. Last year, she worked with SEAMEO RETRAC in HCMC while on sabbatical leave from her university.

She has had a life-long interest in language development and translation work: for a decade, she co-edited and produced (with her colleague and spouse) a journal of international Northern poetry (ICE-FLOE) that included original text and English translations. Her current focus is on best practices for English language learners' placement, student motivation and persistence, and vocabulary instruction.
